Tyree A.M.E. Church
Germantown
Public worship

Standing on the western edge of the black community of Germantown is Tyree A.M.E. Church, a cross-shaped frame structure built in 1915. Supported on a raised brick foundation the gable-front south and east elevations are defined by tripartite windows of colored glass. The Palladian-inspired windows as well as the cross-shape of the building were taken from classical designs that contrasted with the popular Gothic Revival architectural forms that dominated church architecture in Worcester County during the period 1870 to 1920.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Tyree African Methodist Episcopal Church stands on the north side of Germantown Road on the edge of the community of Germantown, located southeast of Berlin, Worcester County, Maryland. The single-story, cross-shaped frame church faces south.

Erected in 1915, the single-story frame structure is supported on a raised common bond brick foundation, and the walls are sheathed with aluminum siding. A layer of asphalt shingles covers the medium pitched gable roofs. Recently, within the past year (1992), a large addition has been attached to the north side.

The south facade is a gable-front elevation dominated by a Palladian window with a rounded arch opening flanked by smaller rectangular windows. Colored glass panes fill each sash. The east and west sides are similar with gable-front facades pierced by colored glass windows. The east gable end is marked by another Palladian window. Located in the southeast corner of the church is a single-door entrance served by a long concrete ramp.

The interior was not seen.
